

Seasonal Architecture and Healthy Architecture: Transitioning from Summer to Autumn

Author: Magister of Architecture, Emina Helić Čamdžić

As we enjoy the warmth of August, are excited to share our seasonal insights, architectural perspectives and budget-friendly design recommendations to enhance your living spaces.

Seasonal Architecture: Transitioning from Summer to Autumn

As Summer goes and are beginning to look ahead to Autumn, architectural considerations shift with the changing colours and temperature. Summer design is about openness, sun-shading elements for too much daylight, while Autumn preparations focus on creating cozy, well-insulated spaces with warmer colour schemes. This transitional period offers the perfect opportunity to evaluate performance of your space throughout the year and make thoughtful adjustments.

Healthy Architecture: Lessons from the Pandemic

The COVID pandemic fundamentally changed our relationship with the built environment. EMINENT ATELIER continues to implement creating healthier, more resilient spaces. Proper ventilation, antimicrobial materials and flexible living areas must become standard considerations by architectural design rather than luxuries.

Our approach regularly incorporates advanced air filtration systems, technology and design elements that support both physical and mental well-being. We have found that clients increasingly value spaces that can reorganise to changing circumstances while promoting health and comfort.

If you don't fit your interior and your space for easier organising, you will have to go through the challenges that you have experienced during the COVID pandemic. The expenses of additional arranging the building will cost you more than if you now arrange your interior on time! Therefore, ease your lifestyle and reserve consultation with the architect.
